PARIS, March 20 (NYT) .-The victory of the government orces in yesterday's French perismentary elections was taken dmost unanimously as a simple and resounding rebuff to Comnunism and to the Socialist strategy of alliance with the

But beyond that, the results were a maze of ambiguities which permitted the rival leaders to ustify conflicting claims and pened new avenues to ponder luture strategies.

The overriding question which has been settled is that France loes not now face the drastic and possibly chaotic upheaval which had seemed imminent, nor the constitutional crisis which was likely if the new legislative majority were opposed to the President of the Republic.

To France's partners and alles, to the stock market and international currency exchanges, that was what mattered

JERUSALEM, March 20 (NYT). The fighting in southern Lebanon between Israelis and Palestinians entered its sixth day today as Israel with reservations. appeared ready to withdraw its troops in favor of a special UN peacekeeping force.

Lt. Gen. Mordechai Gur, the Israeli chief of staff, said today that Israel was firmly in control of most of Lebanon south of the Litani River.

Israeli Foreign Ministry officials, the Cabinet and Defense Minister Ezer Weizman all stressed numerous times today that a withdrawal must be accompanied by assurances that southern Lebanon will not again be a staging area for Pales-

"Any settlement in southern Lebanon must insure that southern Lebanon will no longer serve as a base for the terrorists and their murderous attacks," an official Cabinet communiqué said. "and insure the well-being and normal way of life of the citizens of Israel and the residents of southern Lebanon."

Mr. Weisman echoed that sentiment at least three times at a press conference he held this evening with Gen. Gur.

Action Is Light "We control the southern part of the Fatabland," Geo. Gur said, referring to areas dominated by Palestiniane, Military activity today, he said, was minimal in contrast to the sharp fighting in recent days. Gen. Gur said 18 Israeli soldiers had been killed since the invesion last Tuesday at midnight and that 250 to 400 Palestinian "terrorists" had perished. He said Israel had taken about 20 prisoners and asserted that he had no figures on civilian casualties in the Israeli land,

Behind Carter's Arms Stand

U.S. Politics' Warning to Russia

By Martin Tolchin ST. SIMONS ISLAND, Ca.,

March 20 (NYT).—President Carter's strongly worded warning to the Soviet Union last week about a military buildup resulted as much from the dictates of domestic politics as from the necessities of international diplomacy, aides to the President acknow ledged privately yesterday.

The warning was issued the day after the administration won a narrow victory on Senate ratifi-cation of the first Panama Canal treaty and began its campaign for ratification of the second treaty. The warning was delivered amid continuing Senate criticism of the Strategic Arms Limitation talks and 10 days before the President's scheduled trip to Latin America and Africa.

The White House considered the speech crucial to shoring up domestic political support for these initiatives abroad, the aides

We wanted Americans to understand that we're not giving everything away," said a White House specialist on national security matters. "We're not giving away the world."

The speech was intended not only to warn the Russians of the perils to peace that were posed by their military buildup, but also to counter rightist critics of the Panama Canal treaties and the SALT talks, the aide said. as well as to assure the American people of the President's commitment to a strong national defense. Another White House aide agreed with this interpretation, and added that most foreignpolicy statements also had domestic political implications. Mr. Carter warned that the Soviet Union's failure to show restraint in its military programs would jeopardize cooperation with the United States. He said it had led this nation to begin a buildup of conventional and nuclear forces.

The President cited the Soviet Union's military buildup over the last two decades, its im-proved nuclear capability and its new ability to project military power in Third World areas such as the Middle East, including the Gulf and the Horn of Africa.

Tass on Friday accused Mr. Carter of virtually abandoning course of threats and a buildun of tension" in relations with the Soviet Union. It was the strongin a sharpening exchange that has developed recently as relations have worsened.

"We expected it, but we didn't expect it this quickly," a White House aide said. He added, however, that the administration did not believe that the President's speech would materially after Soviet relations or undermine negotiations being conducted between the two nations. Administration aides characterized the strong Soviet reaction as "pro

The Soviet Union is looking for foreigners to move to Moscow and work in its international publishing houses, touching up translations of Soviet political propaganda and cultural material for distribution abroad. The foreigners do not have to be Communists, Soviet officials said, and the pay and benefits are good. The usual arrangement is a two-year contract that includes free round-trip transportation to Moscow, a furnished, subsidized apartment and an income that is princely by Soviet standards.

"The content of the material is our problem-the stylists' job is just to watch the language," a publishing official insisted. "We don't try to make the foreigners into Communists or to

The stylists' job is to take rough English and other translations of books and pamphlets, already prepared by Soviet translators, and touch up spelling and style so the writing sounds more natural. Some stylists find that up to 60 or 70 corrections per page are

Palestinians Said to Have Suffered Irreversible Setback

By James M. Markham BEIRUT, March 30 (NYT) .--

Although Israel has faced stiff registance in its invasion of southern Lebanon—at least 55 Israeli soldiers have been killed, according to reliable Western reportsthe Palestinian guerrilla movement in this country appears to have suffered a major strategic setback that might be preversible if a UN force consolidates the Israelis' hold on the region.

. Fighting still continues in the south, but in diplomatic and political quarters here preliminary post-mortems on the six days of the war have already begun following the Israeli occupation of a 450-square-mile chunk of land south of the Litani River.

Clashed in Civil War One of the main conclusions is that, although the Israelis have not come close to dealing a mortal blow to the Palestinians' military capacities, they have for the moment moved their center of operations importantly northward, where they could fall increasingly under Syrian domination and control. The other groups will almost surely wait to see what happens to the Socialists before deciding which fork to take themselves. This is because the dynamics of French politics have developed a peculiar cross-weave of interests. So far, the parties have been divided into two well-defined alliances, of the left and the right. But there are unavowed common interests between Socialists and Giscardists in developing a center-left cominion which might push the other two parties to the impotent fringes, and there are common interests between the Communists and neo-Gaullists in maintaining the existing confrontation of blocs which leaves scant maneuvering room between them. And yet again, the Communists and the Giscardists share an interest in seeing that the Socialists split into left and right wings which each would hope to absorb. And the Socialists and the Gaullists share interests in seeing the Giscardists immobilized, so that they might divide up that terrain.

It is precisely the intricacy, and gid in-fighting to the problems of the country that leaves the voters confused and wavering. Whether the period ahead will clarify or merely prolong the dilemma of how to schieve an undramatic transfer of power and how to respond gradually to the society'e need for evolution, remains to be seen. In the headiness and the headaches of the day after elections, talk was already focused on 1981, the next presidential contest, rather than on the new mandate to be exercised. So far. as Mr. Mitterrand said grimly last night, nothing is really

Vast Military Stores

Meanwhile, the Israelis are reported to be counting the vast military stores machine guns, mines, anti-tank weapons and ammunition—that the Palestinians had stocked in tunnels and caves in the south. Much of this booty was paid for by Libya and shipped into Tyre. The flow into Tyre picked up sharply after the Israelis last summer lifted their naval blockade, suggesting that they wanted the weapons to come Not long before their attack into southern Lebanon, the Israelis are reliably reported to have boarded a Greek-registered gun-running boat that was headed for Tyre and, after inspecting it. allowed it to pass.

To further strengthen their political hold on the south, the Israelis are known to have begun receiving small ships bearing reinforcements for the 500-man Lebanese Christian army that they had nurtured and armed in three small enclaves in south Tehanon for almost two years. At least 300 Christian fighters are reported to have left the Lebanese port of Jounie in the last few days. The fighters are paid about $600 a month by their commanders, and guaranteed a pay-ment of $17,000 to their families should they be killed in battle,

Russia Reported To Test Shuttle

WASHINGTON, March 20 (UPI).—The Soviet Union has built and tested a delta-winged manned space vehicle similar to the U.S. space shuttle, Aviation Week and Space Technology reported today. "Russia's space shuttle test vehicle has been drop-tested from a Soviet Tu-95 Bear homber in atmospheric tests," it said. The Soviet vehicle, which is reported to be smaller than the 150,000-pound U.S. version, has been based for more than a year at an isolated test facility.

The Soviet shuttle under test could be launched with cargo and crew and rendezvous and dock with orbiting Soviet space sta-tions such as the Salyut," Avia-tion Week said. "Following or-bital activities, the Soviet shuttle would re-enter the atmosphere like the NASA shuttle orbiter and land like an aircraft. It could be refurbished, reloaded and relaunched again like the U.S. orbiter vehicle."

Precisely how many Californians have signed the directive to physicians is unknown; it is of wide-bodied jets, which reduced the number of flights and some even mora difficult to determine how many deaths have been allowed to happen under the directive. But the California Medical Association reports only a "minimal" response.

The reason, observers say, is the law's narrow focus. The direc-tive is legally binding only if a patient has been certified as terminally ill at least 14 days before the directive is signed. Moreover, the law contains a strict witness requirement, a five-year renewal provision and excludes pregnant women.

It said an oral statement was delivered to a Soviet Foreign Ministry official today by Susumu Matsubara, Japanese congul in Moscow.

The Japanese rebuttal was directed at Moscow's statement March 6 denouncing Japan's demand for the return of the islands. Moscow claimed that no territorial problems exist between the two countries.

The Japanese statement said the four islands, situated near Japan's northernmost island of Hokkaido, belong to Japan historically and legally. Russia seized them at the end of World

The loudest voices now heard in support of sacrifices and austerity are those of Communist union leaders.

The unions' campaign for economic reform helped topple the last Italian government and gave union leaders a priority position in negotiations to pot together snother government.

These shifts have left some employers incredulous and others skeptical, but there seems to be little doubt about the sincerity of the unions, even if there are misgivings about how their drive will work out.

"If we want to be consistent with the objective of reducing unemployment, it is clear that the improvement of the conditions of work of the employed workers must take second place," said Luciano Lama, head of the CGIL, an umbrella organization that includes about half of Italy's 8 mil-

Figures issued by the Champagne Producers Association showed that Britain imported 1,600 bottles more than Italy and became the leading buyer of champagne.

Champagne sales to the British Isles in 1977 totaled 7.305.271 bottles—up from 5,281,686 in 1976 and 3,064,594 the previous year. Italy's consumption rose by more than a million bottles in 1977 to 7.303,666, the producers said. A new entry at the other lent of $269,000 in liquidazione addition to a pension of $1,513 a month

But the shrill reaction from some warkers and union officials to the Lama interview subsided on Feb. 14, when a congress of liaban workers, representing the three confederations, endorsed almost unanimously the new approach he had proposed. Mr. Lams saw it as a turning point in Italian labor.

How historic it will prove to depends on implementation. There is no precise blueprint, nor are there percentage formulas determine the amount of austerity and sacrifice. And great latitude is left to those who now negotiate each contract. doubts have been raised about how sacrosanct the contracts will be.

A troubling and controversial development last November at the Fiat automobile plant in Turin inspired some of the misgivings. Flat sought Saturday overtime for 3,800 workers to build an extra 4,500 of its exceptionally popular 127 model. The workers agreed but the unions refused, and pickets

enforced the union decision. Fiat insisted that its contract with the unions allowed the overtime. Furthermore, Fist said that failure to build the extra cars would risk diversion of orders to French and German cars by impatient purchasers.

Fiat agreed to add 200 permanent employees; the union said that overtime could not be justified at a time of national unemnent workers.

Supreme Court To Hear Suit on News Disclosure

WASHINGTON, March 20 (AP).—The Supreme Court agreed today to decide whether public officials suing for libel may force journalists to tell what were their thoughts, opinlons and conclusions while preparing a news story.

The court will review a ruling by a U.S. Appeals Court last November in a pending $44.7-million lawsuit by former Army Lt. Col. Anthony Herbert against the CBS television network and others. The lower court said reporters and editors who are sued for libel do not have to disclose such information.

Mr. Herbert was stripped of his command in the 173d Airborne Brigade after formally charging his superior officers in 1971 with covering up war crimes in South Vietnam.

Barry Lando, a producer of the CBS program "60 Minutes," investigated the controversy. The research led to a Feb. 4, 1973, telecast, "The Selling of Col. Herbert," in which the truth of Mr. Herbert's charges was called into question, Mr. Lando also wrote an article for the Atlantic Monthly magazine about his findines Mr. Lando, CBS correspondent Mike Wallace and the mag-

Social and Administrative

Unlike the American Kennel Club. The Kennel Club [the "The because it was the first, founded in London in 1873] is simultaneously a social club occupying comfortable Mayfair headquarters with drinking and dining facilities, and the administrative head of the British dog world, a hig industry. In the latter role it registers pure-bred dogs, thus determining eligibility for show; issues export pedigrees for dogs leaving the country; sets staudards for breeds, and runs Crufts, one of the world's most important dog shows.

The money earned from these activities; difficult to estimate but easily approaching $1 million, is dumped into a central account which funds the social club, according to Mrs. Nagle. What she hopes to secomplish in her sex discrimination suit is the separation of the social side from the administrative one, making The Kennel Club a strictly professional body. "We don't went to muck up the think we do," Mrs. Nagle said disdainfully. "We only want to split off the social club. Unfortunately, dogs are now a big business and The Kennel Club should be run in a businesslike way." The women's branch of the club is supporting Mrs. Nagie's legal action, which she says she will take "all the way to the top."

Reluciant to Talk

The club's secretary, Lt. Comdr. John Williams, is predictably reluctant to discuss the lawsuit but notes that the Sex Discrimination Act permits segregated private clubs. "We don't dis-criminate as far as showing, licensing, etc., are concerned. But it's a private members' club we don't think we're breaking the law," he said in The Kennel Chib's London office. Comdr. Williams admits that there is a quota of women on subcommittees—no more than 25 per cent-and that women are excluded from certain commit-

Kennel Club's quaint prejudices comes at a time when the dog world is trying to put up a unified front against the wave of anti-dogism currently shocking England. The Crufts poisoning and dognapping made headlines here. Britain, with one dog for every 9.4 persons, is by no means the world leader in the number of dogs per capita—it is out-distanced by far by the United States, which has one dog for every 5.7 persons. But national preoccupation with the animals is extreme. The Queen is often serrounded by her six dogsthree Corgis and three crossbreeds, that she feeds daily. During the week before Crufts the London Times ran some halfdozen dog stories, plus front-page pictures of the more

glamorous scecimens 400 Letters

But in January a violently antidog article appeared in the Guardisn and its writer received about 400 letters, most of them supporting her views. Dog people are aware of this growing antagonism and hope to combat it with Pro-Dogs, formed by Leslie Scott-Ordish, a breeder who chose as the group's slogan, "Education Not Legislation."

"We need to get out information about dogs—that they're not a health risk or pests," she said. "Rahies has given dogs a bad image—we're trying to light that. And, of course, people are intoler-ant of dogs' fouling because they feel it's dangerous,"

Mrs. Nagle, whose immense Irish wolfhounds weigh up to 155 pounds and grow up to 34 Inches tall, believes that dogs are getting out of hand because The Kenne Club isn't doing enough to police the industry. "Dogs are bred like piga," she said. "They're allowed to run locse in the city, where they don't belong. So people forget about how much good dogs can do."

Anti-doz sentiment is based on three things, according to Comdr. Williams. "First, the mess they make on footpaths. Then the number of strays roaming around, mating indiscriminately, forming packs," he said. "Third is the fear, terribly exaggerated, that humans can catch dog diseases." If Mrs. Nagle wins her suit and opens up membership in The Kennel Cluh to women she hopes one function of the organization will be to mobilize sentiment against certain injustices to dogs.

"Is all this research using dogs necessary?" she asked. dogs be used to test cosmetics, or grow a new species. He distinguished between marjoram and oregano, which is more than most persons can do today. The housewife, if she uses either of these herbs at all, asks for oregano or marjoram, and, with-out knowing which she has, takes whatever is given her by the grocer, who does not know which he is selling either. Yet each of these delightful spicy herbs has its own personality; and as I dealt with marjoram in this space last year, suppose we attempt to define oregano in terms of its differences from marjoram. It differs in name—or at least it does for those who keep its names straight. This should be easiest for those who use its scientific name: A species whose generic name is Origanum is oregano, if it is Majorana it is marjoram. Unfortunately, one of the greatest of those who use scientific terminology, indeed the one who invented a great deal of tt. Tannaeus himself, mixed things up by baptizing marjoram Ori-

The name of Linnaeus should

tions are now sadly outdated. Curiously, the generic name Origanum was used correctly before his time, as well as after it. Gerard called it Origanum hispani-cum in his text and Origanum creticum under the drawing which accompanied it.

Popular usage ordinarily identifies oregano by adding some qualifying adjective to the word "marjoram." One such combination is that used by Gerard, basterd marjoram, Another is wild marjoram, which probably dates from the time when oregano-was indeed only picked wild, but now-adays wild marjoram is usually equated illogically with Origanum nulgars, the only species which is cultivated. Dwarf marjoram is another term; oregano indeed does not grow as high as marjoram, but its leaves, as Gerard noted, are thicker and bushier. Country folk call oregano shepherd's is indeed very close to thyme in its chemical composition.

It differs in its botanical nature, and one of those differences. meshes with what seems to be a confusion in names. Books which give directions for grow-ing herbs sometimes tell us that marjoram can be grown in window boxes or indoors in pots, and indeed it can, even in containers occupied simultaneously by other seasoners, chives or paraley, for instance. But they add that in these restricted spaces it some-times develops a sort of neurosis and begins, inexplicably, to languish, and can only be saved by being moved outdoors. I suspect that this occurs when the herb grower has planted, inadvertently, not marjoram, but oregano. Ore gano is ill adapted for planting in pots, despite the fact that some writers use "pot marjoram": as a synonym for oregano. The fact is that oregano should not be grown in pots. It has a spreading root system and tends to sprawl over the ground (Gerard noted this too), while marjoram, though it bends gracefully from its greater height, still remains erect. Marjoram stays where it is put, oregano demands room for expansion.

Oregano is hardier than marjoram and consequently enjoys a wider distribution, Marjoram sticks very close to the Mediterranean, where it was born. Oregano penetrates into even quite cool reaches of the temperate zone ttoday it grows wild in England, for instance). Gerard called it "bastard Marjerome of Candy," that is, of Ceylon. The Traveler.

We may guess that it was oregano, the traveler, which was to Shiva and Vishnu, though it may well have been marjoram which in Egypt was dedicated to Osiris. Oregano will grow on quite arid soil which marjoram would not appreciate; in southern and western brance, oregano is particularly flavorful when it comes from barren hillsides exposed to much sun Cout. along the Mediterranean coast therefore better sutted for its second most important use, that of making perfume).

There is one troubling fact about the distribution of oregano which might seem to cast doubt on the accuracy with which oregano has now been distinguished from marjoram: Foods as a rule are most widely eaten on the territories to which they are native. This basis, marforam should be favored in the Mediterranean region, oregano elsewhere. The observable fact is just the opposite: The Mediterranean prefers oregano. This may be ex-

It differs in taste. Mediter-ranean peoples (and peoples in hot countries generally) like stronger, hotter foods than peoples of cooler regions. Oregano smells and tastes stronger than the delicate sweet marjoram, and (as, again, Gerard noted) gives off a pungent odor in the garden, whereas marjoram hardly makes its presence felt unless it is bruised. Oregano is essential to Latin cookery, says the Encyclopedia Britannica, by which we should probably understand "Mediterranean cookery." Neapolitans insist that oregano, not marjoram, should flavor pigza. The Bolognese make the same stipulation for their ragu. The Near East uses it freely on dishes of tomato and eggplant, and the Greeks, on their mutton kebab, even use a local species, Originum dubium, which is much stronger than Origonum vulgare Oregano, like marjoram, and, for that matter, a great many other herbs, is stronger dried than fresh. In France, Italy and this purpose; Greece and North Africa prefer the flower heads. The French gastronomic writer James de Coquet has written of a fish sauce flavored with ore-

other reference to the use of the seeds as food. Considering the relative pungency of oregano and marjoram one might wonder whether Erasmus (or his translator) did not get the wrong plant hy the stem when he wrote: "Thus . . . speaks the marjoram: Keep away from me, swine: my scent is not for you, for although this plant has a sweet smell swine cannot endure its scent.

Hence France will not engage in the series of adventures in economics proposed by the left. nor will the presence of a Communist group in the government pose problems for the

Beyond those very important points, however, questions remain after the election. How will Chirac's neo-Gaullists work with Barre's moderates? Will the government coalition try, as Giscard d'Estaing has done, to attract the left's right wing, or push farther in the Gaullist direction? Will the Socialists oust Mitterrand, or blame it all on the mulish Communists? And will the latter seek again to patch up differences with the Socialists—or simply plow ahead on their

The possible developments in French politics are many-especially in light of the fact that the difference between left and right in the popular vote was far less than the latter's majority in the National Assembly would seem to indicate. France has given the center-right another chance, but its people are still restless; the economic prob-

The French political tradition of uttering lems that caused the uneasiness reflected in the pre-vote polls remain to be solved.

In this France is no different from West Germany, Britain or the United States. What it also shares with those countries is a present preference for cautious approaches to inflation and unemployment, to the recession which has afflicted all of the industrialized West, as well as Japan.

Given these similarities of problems and approaches, France can maintain its relationships with the other industrialized states, and join in efforts to find common answers to their common questions. But French nationalist independence has always been strong, and its Gaullist tradition in that respect is still very much alive.

Nevertheless, the urgent need for economic cooperation is very great; recognition is essential that world markets are vital to the industrialized countries and mere competition in those markets is not enough to insure prosperity. Thus far, there has been more talk than action at upper levels of the Western economy. The French elections should help to move the leaders beyond the conversational level since it shows a continuance of confidence in the broad objectives of that leadership-but also demonstrates that that confidence may not endure much longer, if practical progress is not

Mr. Carter's Tough Talk

You've got to give the Russians this: They were absolutely right in perceiving a change in tone and even substance in the speech Jimmy Carter gave in Winston-Salem, N.C., the other day. It was a tough speech. There were no references to "inordinate" fear of Communism in it. On the contrary, the President now observed merely that "old ideological labels have lost some of their meaning"-an interesting choice of words. Overall, Mr. Carter used the occasion to assert a rock-like commitment to maintaining and, if necessary, strengthening the nation's military defenses, and he did not leave his listeners in any doubt as to where he thought the principal threats were coming from. It was this that the Russians, reacting with uncommon speed in a waspish Tass statement, found so offensive.

Thus the President spoke of "an ominous inclination of the Soviet Union to use its military resources to intervene in other people's conflicts; he cited an "excessive Soviet buildup" of arms in Europe; and he suggested that the United States might have to go forward with advanced strategic weapons systems to counter the relentless and fast-paced decade-long Soviet pursuit of a bigger and meaner strategic nuclear assenal.

Our own first response is simply this: that the Russians, having so astutely noted the turning up of the heat under the hurner of U.S.-Soviet affairs, should ask themselves what contribution their own activities in this new President's first year made to the Carter verbal escalation. We think they contributed plenty-a failure to slacken their provocative strategic and theater arms huildup or to signal restraint in their African adventures. Mr. Carter's defense budgets have carried numerous hints and implicit offers of the we-won't-if-you-don't kind, and the Russians have not responded.

That is one reason Jimmy Carter cannot ignore either the Soviet enterprise or the domestic unease that exists concerning much of his national security policy. But it is not the only reason, and here we come to what strikes us as the second interesting fact about the President's Winston-Salem speech: Why he felt he had to give it-and why now. Our sense of it is that Mr. Carter made his own important contribution to the political circumstances that required the speech.

He did this by, over his first year in office, putting forth, one by one, individual programs and decisions and policies that created a widespread public impression of wobbly, if not failed, resolve. Never mind for the moment that individually—from the inherited Panama negotiations, to the B-1 decision, to the prospective South Korean disengagement, to the predicament in the Horn of Africa-he may he said to have been acting on sound instinct or sound advice. The point is that the individual parts seemed to many to speil out a backing off from vital prior commitments to our own defense and that of our allies. More order and coherence and a relating of the various parts to the whole are required if Mr. Carter is to avoid this same pitfall in the future.

And he needs to. For it is painfully obvious that one reason the President was obliged to speak as he did was to establish credibility for any new SALT treaty he brings before the Senate. That is likely to be a very big and rough domestic battle, and the odds against his prevailing will be strong unless he can overcome the doubts that have been generated among parts of the public and in Congress by a certain seeming haphazardness of anomach now. It sees saying that he also needs to bring back a genuinely worthy agreement, and that is one of the things he seemed to be telling the Russians in his Winston-Salem speech: It set out some very tight and tough standards for a SALT agreement. Were they too rigid? We don't know. They were couched in language susceptible of a broad range of interpretation. But we do know that some stiffening along the lines of Winston-Salem was

Not that any or all of this should be the source of unrelieved gloom. The fact is that Mr. Carter is only one year into his presidency and that U.S.-Soviet relations under a Carter administration are only that old. It is hardly surprising that the skirmishing and adjusting and misreading and revising is still going on. We think there is no reason to be despairing about SALT or other manifestations of so-called détente policy-at least not if the Russians and the Carter administration ponder how things came to the present disagreeable pass.

Wisdom and reason carried it and France is the winner . . . This March 19 will remain in history as a day of extreme joy. Because nothing, tomorrow, will menace our liberties: There will be no Communists in government . . . It is a whole new situation, a situation where national reconciliation is rapidly beginning to surface . . . This nation must chase away the poisonous myth of a "right" and a "left"—those irreducible opponents. The majority of the French people said "no" to misery and "no" to absurdity. Everything shows, with great speed, that this majority will increase, with the return of the good and great tradition of Socialists, and of parliamentary and governmental life.

The 'Hollywood 10'-30 Years Later

By Ring Lardner Jr.

NEW YORK—There were 19 of repudiste everything we believed us who came to be known as "unfriendly witnesses" because of our expressed attitude toward the House Committee on Un-Amer-ican Activities, I couldn't figure out then or now how they were selected, but on the available evidence, I'd say haphazardly, there were some fairly outspoken radicals, known by me as a party member to be Communists, but others of equal prominence were not on the list, and four or five of the ones that were had only the most tenuous connections with the party and the left generally.

Soon after we had been subpoensed, 18 of the 19 met with a group of lawyers to talk about what to do at the hearings. The one who stayed away was Bertolt Brecht because of his special status as an alien and his anviety to get to East Germany after his appearance without being delayed by legal procedures.

The first thing we had to rec-ognize was that the committee had us in a rather tight bind, with strictly limited choices, all of them involving distinct risks to our liberty and continued amployment, especially for those of us who were indeed members of the Communist party.

Prosecution

If you weren't you could say so, but because it was under compulsion you would be conceding the right of Congress to go into such matters and helping to isolate those who had exercised their refectly legal right to be Communists. If you told the congressmen it was none of their bustness, you faced the likelihood of cution for contempt. Some of the subpoensed men who were Communists wanted to say so, to proudly proclaim an affiliation they had been reluctantly concealing because that was party policy in Hollywood. islasm for this stand declined when it was pointed out that the committee's next demand would be to name all the other members they knew. If they balked at informing, they would still have to invoke either the freedom-of-speech or the self-incrimination provisions of the Bill of Rights, ending up in either case with a shakler defense against contempt than if they had anewered no question at all in a privileged area.

Once that last position was agreed upon to answer no such questions the remaining decision for each of us and the group as a whole was whether to base our silence on the First or the Fifth Amendment. Beginning with the next round of hearings in 1951, scores of witnesses did invoke the Pifth, and it would have been lost, to follow our path to prison. For us, however, to use the Fifth back in 1947 would have had several drawbacks.

First, we would have been saying in practical effect that we thought it was a crime to be a Communist—this when no mem-ber of that party had even been indicted under the Smith Act.

Blacklist

Second, we recognized from the start that there was the danger of a blacklist emerging from these proceedings, and we knew it would be hard for the studies to proscribe us if we were upheld by the courts for asserting our First Amendment rights. But even if we were upheld on the Fifth, the general stigms which unthinking people attach to it would make it sier for our bosses to organize and justify a hlacklist.

The third and most important limitation was that while the Fifth could seriously impede the committee's work, and its applica-tion to a question about Communist membership needed testing, it did not challenge the committee's very existence. By using the First Amendment, we would be saying the whole investigation was unconstitutional—that where Congress was forbiden to legislate, Congress was forbidden to investigate. Hearings such as these would be proven to have no valid purpose. In a situation, therefore, in Which the only safe and acceptable course open to us was to in and prove we meant it by making trouble for other people, we could not be regarded as heroes for choosing a course of decency instead. In fact, we were doubly disqualified from heroic status: We weren't volunteers and we thought we were going to be winners.

Reflection

It is an interesting reflection on how far all three branches of the government departed from U.S. tradition during those dark years that all the relevant Supreme Court decisions up till that time gave us confidence that our position would be vindicated. One that seemed to apply had gone unchallenged since 1880. It said in part: "We feel equally sure that neither of these bodies possesses the general power of making inquiry into the private affairs of the citizen."

And snother that sounded even more pertinent had been handed down as recently as 1948: "If there is any fixed star in our constitutional constellation, it is that no official, high or petty, can prescribe what shall be orthodox in politics, nationalism, religion or other matters - of opinion, or force citizens to con-fess by word or deed their faith therein." The very same court from which those words had come, with eight Roosevelt appointees, remained intact when we testified. It was the death of two while our case was pending, and only Albert Maltz and I have membered."

For us, the blacklist began only a month after the hearings and lasted for the more fortunate of us into the 1960s. In the soring of 1950 we were denied a Supreme Court hearing, with only Justices Black and Douglas dissenting, and by summer we were serving our sentences. In the fall our number was reduced by one when Edward Dmytryk announced from his place of in-carceration that he had seen the light. Soon he discovered that a mere expression of remorse, however intense, was not enough for the committee or the producers. In order to work again, he was told, one had to name names. It didn't matter what names; the committee probably had them anyway. In fact, later on, when some cooperative wit-nesses couldn't come up with a respectable list, names were provided them by the committee staff from their ample supply. It was a ritual that was required, but not a meaningless ritual. To the unordained confessors Capitol Hill, it was an act of veloped a program to meet these difficulties. As presented in his recent book, "French Democracy" he wants a higher minimum wage, more progressive taxes, decentralization of government, and a freeing of a price control sys-tem which tends to push banks and other enterprises in favor of the haves against the have-nots.

For the first three years of his presidency, that is from 1974 forward Giscard d'Estaing's reform ideas were blocked by two politi-cal barriers. On the left, the Communists and Socialists under Francois Mitterrand denounced them as mere palliatives designed to maintain the status quo.

Reforms Opposed

On the right, there was a Gauilist majority under former Prime Minister Chirac. He opposed re-form as concessions to the leftists. Where the President played for time to let the Socialists and Communists fali apart, Mr. Chirac resigned as prime minister because Giscard d'Estaing would not take on the left win in an early election.

The voting on the last two Sundays justified the President's instinct for moderate reform in almost every way. Though the election came at a bad timewith inflation running over 10 per cent and unemployment over 1 million—candidates identified with Giscard d'Estaing scored a marked triumph.

The Union for French Democracy, a party organized on the Presiden's behalf in the last days of the campaign, won 137 seats and emerged as the second largest party in the National As-

As the President predicted, moreover, the Socialists and Communists fell apart. The Communists first inflicted upon the Socialists a "Common Program" which called for something like a thousand different nationalizations. That show of strength scared French voters, and as a result the united jeft, instead of winning the 53 per cent majority predicted for the first ballot on March 12, won only 49.5 per cent.

As for the Gaullists they fell from 170 to 148 seats in the National Assembly. Many of the old guard who had opposed the Giscard d'Estaing reforms were beaten. The drop probably would have been much greater except for the dynamic campaigning of Mr. Chirac-which probably explains the record 85 per cent turnout in the runoff election.

Theoretically, the President has the makings of a good moderate majority. The Socialists are in disarray, and he can pull some of! them over to his moderate reform program. The Gaullists, having suffered because of their identity with the past, also look ripe for presidential cajolery.

But the Socialists and the Communists still command nearly half the French electorate. If the Socialists desert the left for a center coalition, they will be abank doning some part of their following to the detested Communists Moreover, the Gaullists remain the largest party in the assembly-end Mr. Chirac has ambitions to take on Giscard d'Estaing in the race for the presidency in 1981.

So Giscard d'Estaing remains far from total command. He ha: averted a leftist takeover, and probably any serious social un-rest. But he has not changed the system. ### Plant Closings, Strikes Cited by Company

LONDON, March 20 (AP-DJ). -British Leyland today reported a net loss of £519 million last year, mainly reflecting extraor-dnary charges of £43.9 million connected with plant closures and other special items.

The state owned car company reported a net profit of $44.2 million in the 15 months ended Dec. 31, 1978. The 15-month period was due to a change in the company's fiscal year.
Sales in the latest year fell 10 per cent to £2.6 billion from £2.9 hillion in the previous period. Pre-tex profit plunged to £3.1 million from £70.5 million. The after-tax loss before extraordinary items was £5 million against a post-tax profit of £46.5 million. Unit sales also dropped to 785,-000 vehicles in 1977 from 981,000 in the 15 previous months. Leyland said the extraordinary charges relate to the closing of the Speke assembly plant in Liverpool, to the production transfer of the TR-7 sports car to Coventry, and to uneconomic operations in South Africa and Scandinavia

Leyland Chairman Michael Edwardes said the company planned to invest heavily "to move shead."

Although the value of Leyland's sales in Britain at 21.32 billion was just above the 21.316 billion in the previous 15-month period, the pound's firmmess hurt the company's overseas markets, Sales, outside Britain in 1977 totaled £1.282 billion, down 22.9 per cent from the £1.576 billion in the previous 15 months. Mr. Edwardes said he expects 1978 to be another difficult year for the company.

He said the company does not

Montedison Losses Up

ಾಯದಿದ್ದರೆ ಅತಿ MILAN, March 20 (AP-DJ). The Montedison group lost 509 billion lire (about $595 million) last year, compared with a los of 161 billion lire the year before, the board of directors announced late today.

The loss was announced just ... C= 10 days after a top company spokesman dismissed as "purest fantasy" hints that the losses might top 400 billion lire.

The losses are to be covered by reserves and a write-down of capital, moves that are to be presented to the annual general meeting April 28.

The main shareholders are the state groups Ente Nazionale. Idrocarburi and Istituto per la Ricostruzione Industriale, which, although they themselves are strapped for capital, will have to bear the brunt of a capital increase following the write-down, of some 200 billion lire.

St. Gobain Net Up 11.8% PARIS, March 20 (Reuters) .-Saint Gobain Pont-à-Mousson's net income rose 11.8 per cent last year to 353.8 million French francs (about $75.7 million) from 316.3 million, the company said today. The board proposed a total annual dividend of 14.55

U.S. Steel Sees Profits Cut By Coal, Iron-Ore Strikes

PTTTSBURGH, Merch 20 (AP- strong gain in capital-spending DJ).-The U.S. steel industry's first-quarter financial results will be chilled by winter snows and long strikes, but steelmakers re-port continuing strength in steel

The harshest prediction comes from indistry leader U.S. Steel, which said that the coal strike and a four-month iron-ore strike settled last December will result in unprofitable first-quarter op-

Chairman Edgar Speer said the expected first-quarter loss will reflect lack of raw-material production to offset substantial fixed mining costs and additional costs for nurchase and transport of "substitute" coal and iron ore. He said these higher-cost substitutes have allowed U.S. Steel "to irvive this period."

If the coal strike ends soon, he said, "the second quarter bould return us to a profitable osition and the third and fourth quarters should continue to im-

Mr. Speer would not comment on whether the first-quarter loss would affect its quarterly dividend, which was cut in January to 40 cents a share from 55 cents. He said that business had noticeably picked up" in recent weeks and added that the order book currently is 15 per cent better then it was in the fourth

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

VW Warns of Shutdown

Volkswagenwerk warns it will have to close production at its six domestic plants March 30 unless the metalworkers strike in the North Baden-North Wuerttenberg region is resolved soon. The closures will be unavoidable because of the shut-off in component supplies from firms in the strike-hit region; VW explains. The company's main component supplier is Robert Bosch, which, together with a number of other important suppliers in the Stuttgart area, has been closed by strike action since last Wednesday. Settlement talks broke down over the weekend, resulting in a lockout by employers at 70 major plants. VW has 106,000 workers at its plants in Wolfsburg. Salzgitter, Hanover, Brannschweig, Kassel and Emden. Daimier Bens has already temporarily suspended production of transport vehicles at its Bremen plant owing to a shortage of supplies.

Restructuring of MBB Seen by Mid-'78

A restructuring in the ownership of Messer-chmilt-Boeling-Blochmy G(BB), West Germany's leading aerospace company, is expected to take place by mid-year, says chairman Helmut Lang-felder. The long-planned move is intended to give private industry a bigger stars and strengthen the company's financial backing. It is expected to lead to the formation of a second industrial consortium to take over about 25 per cent of MBB from the states of Hamburg and Bavaria which currently hold a total stake of about 4 per cent. An existing consorthum, consisting of Thyssen, Siemens and Aérospatiale of France, currently holds about 26 per cent. Under the new arrangement, Boeing would give up its cur-rent 8.9-per-cent, stake in MBB. The new consortium is expected to be made up of Allians Versicherungs, Motoren- und Turbinen Union (a unit of Daimler-Bens and Maschinentsbrik Augsburg-Nuremberg), and Robert Bosch. Mr. Langfelder says MBB hopes to boost its nominal cap-Ital to 200 million deutsche marks from its current 85 million DM. The capital increase is "urgently required" in line with the planned restructuring, he says. Company sources say the capital increase could coincide with a possible takener by MBB of the West German works of the financially troubled Dutch-German combine VFW-Pokker under the general restructuring of the agreepace industry.

LUSAKA, Zambie, March. 20 (NYT).—Zambia, which devalued its currency by 10 per cent and announced a series of austerity moves last week, has apparently met the stringent terms set by the International Monetary Fund as conditions for a $390-million loan to shore up this country's badly buffeted and sagging coon-

Zembis, which once had the highest living standard in black Africa, has found itself in a tangle of economic, social and political crises. As a supplier of bases and steadfast diplomatic backing for black nationalist Rhodesian guerrilles, the country has been a target for military attack by the Salishing regime from across the Zambezi River.

The new austerity program is budget: adopted earlier this year that has cut social envices and raised taxes. Transport problems on the only enfirmed in the conntry that still is operating have intensified, further sperling imports and exports. Furthermore, under the impact of the worsening economy and increasing unemployment, the crime rate has risen sharply. The police recently have made sweeps aimed at makeuding bands whose violence has touched off a small but ominous emigration of technicians from the copper belt. Finally, there are chronic shortages. These have gone beyond impry items and now include such items as meat, medicine and fer-

Although these difficulties are connected, the measures announced in Parliament by John Mwanakatwe, the minister of finance, focused largely on improving the position of the copper mines. The mines, which are the economic heart of the nation, central bank buying, principally an extremely aggressive support operation by the Bank of Japan, the French franc responded favorably to the center-right coalition's wider-than-expected major-ity in yesterday's election.

In contrast, gold suffered from the left's defeat in the French tions. The metal also essed on fears that the United States may soon decide to sell some of its massive gold hoard to raise more funds to support the dollar in the foreign exchange market. Gold traded at $179.45 an ounce late today, down from $183.75

Friday. The French franc indicated at 4.54-59 to the dollar in early trading, eased to around 4.61 following a one-percentage-point cutin the French call-money rate to 9.5 per cent and closed at 4.6350 frames, up sharply from 4.6875 france Friday.

Elsewhere, the dollar was generally stronger following support purchases by the Bank of Japan totaling an estimated $400 million to prevent the dollar from falling below 230 year. Following that show of determination, the dollar advanced to 231.30 yen at the European close from 230.025 in

The dollar ended at 2.0420 deutsche marks, little changed from 2,0450 Friday. It rose to 1.9195 Swiss frames from 1.8925, to 2,1832 guilders from 2,1820, but eased to 31.72 Belgian frames from 31.73.

Subsistence Farming

Subsistence fearning, which els where on the continent sustains millions, supports a relatively small number here. There is a high dependence on imported food. As President Kenneth Kaumda, bas chemved, "We are partly to blame, but this is what comes from the curse of being born with a copper spoon in our mouths."

A severe consequence of the downturn is that, with the short-age of foreign capital, private suppliers have had to waft up to 15 months for payments to be approved for remittance by the central bank. As a result, some businesses have been reluciant to send needed goods. It is an oddity that 70 per cent of the foreign reserves go directly for meterials keep the mines running.

It is assumed that a major share of the IMP loan would be used to clear up the backlog of remittances for the items to short supply. Another part will go for the payment of debt service, staying off the possibility of default

By Reginald Stuart

DETROIT, March 20 (NYT) .- table operations and some ex-Chrysler will ask its shareholders this spring to approve the issuance of 20 million shares of preferred stock and an additions! 40 million shares of common to finance its ambitious capital-improvement program over the next five years.

If the proposal to issue preferred stock is approved at the annual meeting on May 2, it would be the first time the company has had such a class of stock. Obrysler said it planned to offer the preferred to the public, probably at $25 a share, with a guaranteed annual return of 10 per cent.

In the distribution of a company's profits, dividends are paid to holders of preferred shares before holders of common stock. Chrysler, the No. 3 U.S. automaker, currently has about 80 million shares of common stock authorized, with about 60 million in the hands of investors and the remainder being held for employee investment

DIORTRIBS. The additional common stock would probably also be offered to employees under a program in which Chrysler pays $1 for each 32 an employee invests. In a brief statement, Chrysler said that no specific time had been set for marketing the stock Preferred Stock a Surprise The move by management to position itself now for raising additional money in the future was not unexpected, although the plan to issue preferred stock caught some by surprise. Last month, in reporting fourth-quarter and 1977 results, chairman John Riccardo said that the company would be spending about $7.5 billion from 1978 through 1982 on research and engineering, tooling costs and plant renovation related to the production of smaller, more fuel-efficient cars. That spending level, Mr. Riccardo said, is about double what the company would have spent by traditional standards. He said Chrysler hoped to recapture about two-thirds of this money through ordinary depreciation and amortization and that the banlace would have to come from profits, elimination of unprofi-

ternal financing, possibly this The huge increase in capital needs forecast by Chrysler is common to the entire U.S. auto industry. General Motors, the leading car maker, and Ford, No. 2. will have spent in excess of $55 billion by 1985 on developing a new generation of cars that meet federal fuel economy, safety and pollution laws.

While GM and Ford have said they anticipate being able to finance their development ograms from internally generated funds, both Chrysler and American Motors will probably be forced into the public money market for the funds.

Real GNP grew at an annual rate of 7.5 per cen tduring the first quarter, 6.2 per cent during the second quarter and 5.1 per cent in the third quarter.

After-tax profits were $104.9-billion annual rate during the final quarter, compared with a $103.6-billion annual rete in the third quarter. The fourth-quarter pace was up 15.4 per cent from the $90.9 billion reported for the 1976 final quarter.

Prices as measured by the implicit price deflator rose 5.9 per cent in the latest estimate compared with 6.1 per cent estimated in Februar and 6.2 per cent in GNP as measured in current dollars was revised to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $1.907 trillion from the $1.963 trillion estimated in February. For the year, GNP totaled $1.89 trillion, up 10.7 per cent from 1976, when it rose 11.6 per cent.

As for the outlook this year the Joint Economics Committee of Congress said today that economic growth rates of 5 to 5.5 per cent are "attainable" this year and in 1979 "with the proper policy mix." The committee's annual report said the administration's forecast of £ 4.7-per-cent rise in real GNF is "within a reasonable range of possible outcomes" this year. It said the administration's goals of 4.8 per cent real growth in 1979, with 6-per-cent inflation and 5.8-per-cent unemployment, are "achievable." However, it said that "if interest rates are allowed to rise further, we run a serious risk of growth below 3.5 per cent in

DULLES

A Biography of Eleanor, Allen and John Foster Dulles and Their Family Network

By Leonard Mosley. Dial-James Wade. Illustrated. 530 pg. $12.95.

Reviewed by Christopher Lehmann-Haupt

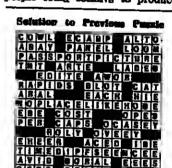

L EONARD MOSLEY's "Dulles" is the 19th book on contemporary history by the inexhaustible former chief war correspondent for the London Sunday Times. (He has also written five novels.) Unlike his other books, which have tended to be bland but entertaining biographies of modern political figures and reconstructions of such great events as the coming of World War II and the development of the Mideast off crisis, this one comes to us under a small cloud of controversy. One of the book's principals, Elegnor Lansing Dulles—who at the height of her career in public service played a major role in the reconstruction of Vienna and Berlin in the aftermath of World War II—has recently accused Mosley of perpetrating a mass of errors and distortions concerning her own career and those of her two older brothers, John Foster Dulles, who was Secretary of State from 1952 until shortly be-fore his death in 1959, and Allen Welsh Dulles, Director of the Central Intelligence Agency from 1953 until 1960.

In themselves, Miss Dulles's censures can be taken with varying degrees of seriousness. She claims that Mosley's book de-scribes Allen Dulles as a "libertine." But although Mosley unambiguously depicts the late spy-master as a bon vivant who enjoyed and attracted the company of women, nowhere in the book does he use the word "libertime," nor does he anywhere suggest that Allen Dulles was morally or sexually unrestrained. Further, she charges that there are at least 900 factoal errors in the book. But even if this is so, since there are at least a dozen facts on every page, it would mean that the book is 85 per cent cor-

Most serious of all: Mies Dulles is put out by the book's implication that she and her brothers formed a "family network" which manipulated foreign policy dur-ing the administration of President Eisenhower, Here her criticism has real substance. Mosley's subtitle is "A Biography of Eleanor, Allen, and John Foster Dulles and Their Family Network." At various points in the text, the author refers to the partners," the "team," and "the Dulles era," When Allen Dulles is forced into retirement by President John F. Kennedy, Mosley writes, "It was only two years before that John Foster, Allen, and Eleanor Dulles had run the foreign policy of the United States among them." And in assessing the cold warriorism of the Eisenhower cra, he tides repeatedly to illustrate how John Foster Dulles initiated a policy of anti-Stalinism and how Allen Dulles, in full cooperation, implemented it.

Nevertheless, in ridiculing as "a schoolboy approach" to history Mosley's implication that three people could countys to produce foreign policy, Miss Dulies miss estimates the gravity and interof this bit of history. It is tel that the author has put his sto together to develop a thesis two, but rather, quite the averse, that he has built his the in order to tell a story or two. It is perfectly true, Mosley it lieves, that the Dulics sibling formed a network, just as he ale theorizes that they were move to do so primarily by a sense of family tradition. Not only doe Mosley make much of that grandfather, John Watson Fosts having been secretary of state under President Benjamin Ras rison, and of their uncle, Rober Lansing, having held the amposition under President Woods Wilson; he also harps heavy handedly on the Dulleses disco-pointment that none of the children showed much inclination for public service.

But his purpose in developing such theses is to lay tracks of which his narrative will resmoothly. And into this narrating he loads all that he is really toterested in writing about. While is tales of derring-do about inter national espionage, such as the Central Intelligence Agency's disging of a tunnel under East Ber lin to tap Fast Germany's tele phone network (80 hrxnrio was the interior of this tunn that its heater melted the six that fell on the street above one night, and early gave tunnel's existence away.)

He tells anecdotes involving to actors in the great internati crises that unfolded during "t Dulles ers." (In the midst of t Suez crisis, after Prime Ministr Sir Anthony Etlen had five time successfully returned for revision the battle plan that he had asked Capt. Basil Liddel-Hart to pas pare for the British campaign in: Saypt, Liddel-Hart finally gray: up and re-submitted his original version, only to have it accept as satisfactory. After Str Anth ny had chewed out Liddel-Ha for taking so long, and Lidde Hart had informed Sir Antho that it was the original plan the he had accepted, Sir Antho threw an intwell at Liddel-Ha who in turn slammed a was basket over the P.M.'s head.) Of course this is a "schoolb approach" to history. And if m believs not only that the Dulle siblings alone were responsible for foreign policy under Presiden Elsenhower, but also that See Joseph McCarthy singlehandeth created anxiety over the threat g domestic Communism, that Foot and Alien Dulles by themsels discovered the terror and intrasigence of Stalinism, and sut that it was Miss Duller's son, De vid, who at the tender age of i set the wheels in motion for the selection of Gen Elsenhower the Republican presidential con didate in 1952. But we don't take Mork

"Dulles" that seriously. We takit as fun and diverting gossip as a chance for Leonard Mosley bring together the many go stories he has mined from published record and his talk and correspondence with great and near-great of The period. That is why Element Dulles, in going after Moster book for its distortions of his tory, has ended up trying to de stroy a chipmunk with a howitse

On the diagramed deal, South the queen. The declarer's natu reached a borderline six-spade contract in which the diamond suit was clearly crucial. After a neutral trump lead, he won in the closed hand and led his singleton diamond. West ducked smoothly, and South misguessed by playing the jack from dummy. This was the normal play, for West might have grabbed the trick holding the ace.

Fast returned a low heart. Looking at the cards, it is easy to see that the slam could have been made by playing the heart ten, but this would have been stummal play. Declarer gave himself his best percentage chance by winning with the ace crossing to the spade queen, and running the dismond king. He hoped to find East with the dismond ace but West produced that card to defeat the slam,

There is an interesting deceptive play available for East in similar diamond situations. It he has A Q X x, he may throw the declarer off track by winning the jack with the ace instead of ral play is then to ruff the thir round, hoping to bring down th Queen from West. So if East wins with the quee there may be some slight reaso to think that he does not have the ace, since he might have tri the deceptive play.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Merch terday. Only Lon Hinkle, who gained third place with a closinground 70, had a good afternoon. Graham carded a 75. "It's a long four days around this thing," Graham groaned,

"But anyone other than Jack Nicklaus who says $34,200 [for finishing second] isn't a big thrill is crazy. That's more like first money in some tournaments." Graham started the day one stroke behind Nicklaus and caught the leader only once, and then briefly. He birdied No. 11. Nicklans bogeyed the 12th by three-putting and they were even. only to see Graham hit a fairway bunker going up 14 and surrender his share of the lead by eventually missing a 10-footer. Another bogey on 16 put Graham two back. Nicklaus' drive into the left rough on 17 caused his lead to be cut in half, but there was no more slippage. "I'm not sure I won this tournament. It's probably hetter to say I survived it," Nicklaus said. "But, no, I don't think par is too bard here. Par is supposed to be just that, as it is in most opens. The more difficult courses tend to weed out the best players although I know it gets to a point sometimes where It's frustrating for a lot of the fellows.

"I observed quite a few of the really good players not playing well this week. It could be that the conditions we play many weeks aren't quite tough enough, when it comes to preparing for something like sawgrass."

The response in IOC circles to the questionnaire "was slightly alarming," Krumm said. "There is a feeling that Unesco would like to replace the IOC," he said. "We're concerned that they keep referring to international competition. They should stay in their own backyard."

Cylmpic Games in Munich—and boycotting, as manifested by

African countries at the 1976

Clympic Games in Montreal.

Both Lord Killanin and the statement defined the "backyard."

"We do feel that the bodies at this table represent competitive sport," the IOC president said.
"And that the sphere of Unesco is physical education."

The statement put it this way: Parallel with competitive sport, there is sport for all that is to say physical and sports education, as well as training, relaxation and lessure activities. It is the duty of governments to promote sport for all, which produce a strong and healthy population throughout the world."

Chanvinism Assailed

Deploring "overchauvinistic attitudes" that he said threatened international sports, Lord Killanin added, "Wa recognize that there will always be politics in sports, but sports should not be used for political purposes."

The IOC statement was expected to be stronger than it was, but Lord Killanin defended its tone. The statement was said to have been issued in a compromise version to be part of the public record before the Unesco committe meets again, in May in

On another subject of reported compromise, a plan to establish a Supreme Council for World Sport, the IOC president reported that studies were continuing.

"It's not something we can go through hurriedly and rapidly," he said, before outlining the bureaucratic steps needed, "The intention is there, and the study of establishing such a body will continue."

Asked to outline such a counchi's framework, he said that it would be composed "of voluntary organizations," such as the IOC, rather than governmental agencles, "But there are twilight zones." he said-perhaps a gesture to Unesco.

Blushing Groom Held Disease-Free

WASHINGTON, March 20 (IRT) .- It was incorrectly reby the International Herald Tribune that Blushing Groom, the winner of last year's Epsom Derby, was suspected as a carrier of equine metritis, a venereal disease.

Officials of the Department of Agriculture and the International Racing Association said today that the horse is not among stallions recently imported to Kentucky from Europe that are suspected of carrying the disease. The IHT regrets the error.

Little Is Victor in Crosby Classic

SAN DIEGO, March 20 (UPT).—Sally Little of South Africa fired a 65, then made a par at the first sudden-death hole to beat Nancy Lopez and win the $165,000 Kathryn Crosby Golf Classic

Lopez, who was trying for her third straight Ladies Professional Golfers' Association victory, left a 16-foot par putt an inch short on the first playoff hole. Little, by chipping to within two feet, picked up the first prize check of $23,500.

She had a remarkable round of eight birdies and one bogey to come out of the pack to catch Lopez at the final hole. Little made an eight-foot birdie putt at the 18th after starting the day at one over per for the 72-hole tournament.

Lonez, who collected $14,600, had a chance to win at 18 but her 12-foot birdie putt fell an inch short of going in. Australian Penny Puls three-putted the final hole to miss joining Little and Lopez in the playoff. Pulz, who won $10,510, had a 68 to conclude the tournament at 283, five under par.

It Matters Not to Win or Lose, It's the NFL Rule

By Red Smith

MIAMI, March 20 (NYT).-On the theory that customers would rather see the Giants lose by 45-20 than 21-6, the men who own proessional football have performed cosmetic surgery on the rules to encourage forward passing and offensive holding. Meeting in Palm Springs, Calif., last week, club owners in the National Pootball League were given figures showing that the average total of 34.4 points scored in a game last fall was the lowest in 35 years. "Gad," they said, aghast, "if this trend keeps up, we'll soon be de-ciding games by hockey scores."

To counter this drift toward stodgy inaction, they provided that blockers protecting the passer may clutch onrushing defensive players by the eyeballs and hurl them to earth, and that receivers going downfield must be allowed to run their patterns and make the catch without physical restraint.

They believe that when the quarterback has more time to locate receivers and the receiver needn't fear being bushwhacked by some practicing fiend like Oakland's George Atkinson, more passes will be completed, more yards gained, more touchdown scored and more clients entertatned.

"I approve the change," says Bob Griese, the Miami Dolphins' unbiased quarterback, "but they didn't go far enough. They said the blocker could have his hands way out here like this, but they didn't say he could grab h's op-

It was pointed out that old rules against illegal use of the hands had never seriously discouraged holding in the past. And from now on, there will be seven officials instead of six to protect a receiver like Pittsburgh's Lynn Swann from Atkinson's karate tender a receiver like Swann untouchable at all times. He may be "chucked" once in the immediate vicinity of the line of scrimmage, to be known hereafter as the concussion zone, but once be has traveled five yards be must be treated like a Ming vase. Under the bunt-and-run regulations last season, he could be smashed by a defensive lineman, slammed by a linebacker, clouted by a cornerback and flattened by the safety. In giving aid and comfort to the offensive unit, the owners are consistent with their policy of recent years. A few seasons ago, they realized that when a blocker clutches his adversary by the throat it is a boyishly impulsive action taken without intent to garrote anybody. "Since the lad means no harm," they reasoned, "a 15-yard penalty is cruel and unusual punishment." So they

plain, my mind keeps wandering into gin. these days to cloning. I guess it all started when I read about the book that will

Room be on the market, revealing that an anonymous multimillionaire had paid to have a child cloned in his own image. The author of the book says the millionaire, a lifelong bachelor, Buchwald wanted to leave a son to posterity, but had found no woman whose genes he considered worthy of his own. He hired a scientist who took one of the man's own ceils, had it hatched hy a woman, cleansed it of all the woman's genetic material and then produced an identical likeness of the rich man. I'm not making this up-it's all in the book.)

Reputable scientists have scoffed at the story, and so far neither the author nor the publisher has produced any proof that it really happened.

My concern is that perhaps it didn't this time, but who is to say in the future that it couldn't? Cloning could soon become as common as the Asian flu. Once we have the knowledge to reproduce exact duplicates of ourselves, with just one cell, it's a whole new ball game as far as the human race is concerned.

I wouldn't mind reproducing a thousand persons just like myself. because I think the world oceds them. But I definitely would be against one more Codsmather. He lives down the block and he's really a mess. He oever washes his car. He lets his dog wander all over the neighborhood. His kids skateboard in the middle of

> There is something wrong with Codsmather's genes, and if we permitted his cells to be cloned, the neighborhood would really go to hell.

On the other hand there's Sara Lee, who works down the hall from my office. Sara Lee is beautiful, bright and a joy to behold. Everyone on the floor has always said that it was a pity that there was only one Sara Lee to go around.

Columnist Robert Novak just told us the other day during a coffee break, "Wouldn't it be wonderful if there was a Sara Lee for everybody?"

I told him, "Some day when they get cloning down pat there will be." Our coffee steamed with the thought. But there are many things that eoter into the moral aspects of cloning which we all must take into consideration. If there was more than one Reggie Jackson would baseball be as interesting? Can the world afford two Ilie Nastases? Or, for that matter, two Robert Novaks? Would Farrah Fawcett-Majors mean as much to all of us if there were 500 of her walking around at the same time? Is there a limit to the number of Billy Carters the country will put up

Once cloning becomes the "in" thing, teenagers are going to want to try it. I don't know of any parents who could survive an exact duplicate of the teenager they have now. Another worrisome thing is that in the beginning, cloning is going to be very expensive and only very rich people will be capable of duplicating themselves. Therefore, until they get the price down, all we'll be able to reproduca wholesale will be oil and gas tycoons who, as they multiply, will lobby for higher and higher prices, with the excuse that they have so many more mouths to feed.

Once the middle class can afford cloning they will probably get Coogress to pass laws forbidding poor people from doing it, because won't want to pay the extra welfare costs. The whole thing will be a shambles unless we start thinking it out today. Each person must search his own heart and ask. "Do I want an exact duplicate of myself to take my place when I'm.

Mecca of Weed for 258 Years

By Gary Yerkey

LONDON (IHT).—In his pale blue shopkeeper's smock, Jeremy Palmer stands at the sales counter and talks smuff. He also talks oigars, cigarettes and pipes. or anything eise to do with tobacco and emoking. It is what he has done for forty

His forum has been Fribourg & Treyer, one of the world's celebrated tobacco shops. For 256 years, it has been a sort of Mecca of the weed.

Mr. Palmer and the rest of the small F & T staff sell all "the smoker's requisites," but many people come just for talk, "Anyone purchasing a pipe for the first time," he said, "should heed two suggestions. First, choose an orthodox shape: No one wants to look stlly. And second, choose briar: Any pipe of lesser quality material will turn you off the art from the

Every spring and fall since 1945, F & T has staged pipe sales, each running until the firm's backlog has been enhausted (at least four weeks) and until some 10,000 pipes have been sold. This spring's sale started March 6.

Reputation and Snuff

But Mr. Palmer is quick to remind visi-tors that F & T, which occupies the same how-windowed premises at 34 Haymarket as it did when it was founded in 1720, built its reputation on spuff. Until 1840 sout sales amounted to some 90 per cent of the shop's turnover. At that time, London snuff shops numbered 15. Of those, only F & T remains today, still racking up snulf sales to the time of 1.25 tong per year (as it's done for the last 20 years), more than any other shop in the world

Spuff is a powder made from a blend of choice tobaccos and perfumed with scented olis-carnation, jasmin, lemon, sandalwood, eto. F & T claims it sells an unequaled variety of smotts (33 kinds), including Attar of Roses (200,000 roses are used in making one-half ounce), which retails at £26 per ounce. Smulf-takers consider an ounce a day a generous allowance.

Modern-day sould enthusiasts, whose number the Society of Snull Crimiers, Blenders & Purveyors says is on the rise, still follow "the true artistic method of taking a pinch" set forth by A. Steinmetz of London in 1857. Or at least approxi-

"Take the Smult-box with your right hand," he begins, "pass the Snuff-box to your left hand; rap the Snuff-box; open the Smull-box; present the box to the company; receive it after going the round; gather the Smuff in the box by striking the side with the middle and forefinger; take up a pinch with the right hand; keep the South a moment or two between the fingers before carrying it to the mose; put the Snuff to your nose; sniff it with precision by both mostrils, and without grimace; close the Snuff-box with a flourish." Then sneeze.

The society's how-to pamphiet, "Make Friends With Shuff," says sunff-takers use it 'because it is refreshing and invigorating, and because it counteracts the mental fatigue caused by the stress and strain of modern life. Others take Smift because they find it keeps them free from colds and gives relief from catarrh and similar complaints. It has also been said that Souli timulates the mind."

Britain currently produces 360 tons of snuff per year, about two thirds of it for nome consumption mainly in the industrial Midlands, the north and Scotland.

Mr. Palmer says: "Snuff made its first appearance on British sold in 1702 when Sir George Rooke, commanding the fleet, captured two huge cargoes of it-one Spanish and the other Cuban on its way to Spain. It was sold cheap in British ports, and its popularity grew steadily (and F & T with it) through the 19th century until the time of the Regency (1810-20) when the habit was almost universal"

The so-called Age of Snuff received a stamp of social approval around 1800 when the Prince of Wales, fater to be the Regent and George IV, announced his fondness for smuff, causing the highest ranks of British society to flock to the soulf room at F & T. When George IV died in 1830, so did snuff's popularity.

The Fall

Smuff's final fall came when the British aristocracy went away to the Crimean War in the mid-1850s and returned home with Turkish, Egyptian and Russian elgarettes in their mouths. Thereafter, to smoke those blends became a sign of status. F & T sold its first cigarettes in

"Forty years ago," Mr. Palmer says, "we sold some 20 different eigarette blends. Now, mainly because of high import duties introduced since the war, we sell only four -Turkish, Egyptian, Virginian and Russian." Their most distinctive cigarette is the Russian Kazbek, which, eithough standard length, is one-third tobacco and twothirds mouthoiece. The hollow mouthpiece was introduced to allow Russian workers wearing heavy gloves, or farmers working in the fields, to hold the cigarette without destroying it. It is so tightly acked, however, that it burns slowly and takes as long to smoke as a normal organite. F & T is the only shop still importing the Kazbek into England.

The origin of the pipe is unclear but certainly dates far back into prehistory. The use of tobacco in pipe-smoking came of course, with the discovery of the New World.

"Wa stock 42 different sizes and shapes of high-quality briar pipes," says Mr. "Briar, as you may know, is a corruption of the French word bruyere, which means heather or heath. The plant, which grows most widely along the Mediterranean coast, takes between 50 and 100 years to meture. The main sawmalls are found in Consica, Sardinia, Greece, Aigeria and Italy. But the turning of the finest bowls is nearly always done in England."

In the 60-page pipe-smoker's bible, "The Art of Pipe Smoking," which Mr. Palmer recommends heartily to first-time pipe smokers. Josopin Verdaguer states flatly: Never buy anything but briar."

But Mr. Palmer says that even when armed with briar, the beginner may find his new-found pleasure less than pleasurable: He agrees with Mr. Verdaguer, who writes:

The beginner often sees the world swirling distrily around him. His tongue may refuse to cooperate or his stomach become violently entagonistic. It goes without saying that these unrisings must be ignored. The stomach will accept its lot; the tongue will calm down; the world will stop swirling. Have faith and be

Toronto psychiatrist Sheraton Appleton bought the house for $390,-000 in 1976. He said that he had hoped to live in it himself part of each year but didn't have the time and he found that being an absentee landlord did not allow him to supervise maintenance. Next door, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Rittner, who paid Nixon $320,000 in May, 1976, are not happy with Appleton, who they say is wrongly advertising his home as the real Nixon residence. "Nixon didn't live there. He only worked there. He lived here." Bittner said. Appleton says that he doesn't care to argue about it. They were both the president's houses," he said. Though the house has been listed for six weeks, the real estate agent doesn't expect trouble in selling it. "All it takes is money," sha said.

More about Margaret: A member of Parliament has said that he would raise the question of what he described as Princess Margaret's "second honeymoon" with her boyfriend Roddy Llewellyn in the House of Commons Thursday. The 47-year-old sister of Queen Elizabeth returned to Britain over the weekend from the island of Mustique in the Bahamas where she had been on holiday with Llewellyn, 30.

Until recently, Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., thought that the giant redwoods were the oldest living things oo earth, and he said so in a newsletter mailed to his constituents. Publisher Ted Watkins read the newsletter and informed Cranston that he was wrong. According to Watkins, the oldest living tree is a 4,500-yearold bristlecons pine growing at the 10,000-foot level in the White Mountains of the Inyo National Forest, Cranston corrected the mistake in a later newsletter and noted that an even older bristlecone pine once grew in the same area. It survived for 4,900 years. And then someooe cut it down to find out how old it was,

Both Helen Reddy and Olivia Newton-John have large and enthusiastic followings in Japan, but the singers have canceled their separate concert tours of that country to protest the recent slaughter of thousands of dol-
